Conference Overview

Ranked 49th in the nation in cardiovascular deaths, 48th in prevalence of smoking, and 43rd in obesity, Oklahomans must take serious steps to reverse these disturbing trends. This conference will increase the capacity of Oklahoma's cardiovascular health programs to address prevention of cardiovascular disease at the community level. Presentations from nationally prominent public health experts will stimulate dialog and collaborative efforts among public health and health care professionals, public officials, and communities to improve the cardiovascular health rankings of Oklahomans. Three tracks will run simultaneously throughout the conference 1) tobacco control, 2) built environment, physical activity, and nutrition, 3) behavioral and chronic disease management. OPHA is dedicated to advocating for these and other health-promoting measures.

Featured Speakers

Dr. Stanton Glantz

Dr. Stanton Glantz is a researcher at the University of California, San Francisco. He has been a long time critic of tobacco and is a top member of the anti-tobacco public health community. In 1994, more than 4,000 pages of secret internal tobacco industry documents mysteriously arrived at Glantz's office at the University of California in 1994. They were sent by a secret source, "Mr. Butts." When he received the documents, he put them on the Internet and was subsequently sued by Brown & Williamson tobacco. He also compiled them into the book, "The Cigarette Papers."

Heather Wooten

Heather Wooten is a Senior Planning and Policy Associate with Planning for Healthy Places at Public Health Law & Policy, where she researches best practices, develops tools, and works with communities to connect land use, economic development, and health. She is a co-author of one of the premier publications on developing and implementing health policy language in land use plans, How to Create and Implement Healthy General Plans.

Conference Objectives

1. Improve understanding of the evidence-based best practices in reducing risk factors for cardiovascular disease that can be applied at the community and state levels.
2. Be familiar with the importance of specific policy initiatives to reduce cardiovascular disease in Oklahoma.
3. Understand the importance of comprehensive strategies and partnerships in addressing cardiovascular health.
4. Identify disparities in CVD trends and risk behaviors and understand strategies to address these factors.
5. Understand state and community-based strategies to:
 - a) Lower tobacco use.
 - b) Enhance the built environment by intentionally creating access to improved nutrition and physical activity.
 - c) Enhance behavioral management and prevention in Oklahoma populations, especially disease screening (hypertension, glucose, cholesterol) and chronic disease management.
